

Collected Essays, Journalism and Letters Vol. 4: In Front of Your Nose, 1945-1950 (Collected Essays, Journalism and Letters of George Orwell, Vol 4)

Volume IV covers the years from the publication of Animal Farm to Orwell's death: years shadowed by increasing ill-health. During this time he tried to drop much of his journalism and concentrate on writing Nineteen Eighty-Four, his last book. But in these years he produced many of his finest essays, continued his analysis of the post-war world in articles for the Tribune and other papers and wrote one of his rare straight pieces of autobiography in Such, Such Were the Joys, a description of his private school and a condemnation of such education. It is fascinating to see so many of his worries about events in the post-war world confirmed by their outcome today.
