HISTORY OF THE Wars in Italy. BOOK XX. CONTENTS. War against the Florentines, in which the Prince of Orange is killed. The Florentines, after a long Siege, subdued by Famine j submit to C?sar, who appoints Alessandro d Medici Head of their Republic. C?sar, after receiving the Imperial Crown in Bologna, takes a Progress into Germany, from whence he returns, and has another Interview with the Pope Bologna. The Pope, to jhew himself a common Father, has, after this, an Interview with the King of France at Marseilles, where a Marriage is agreed between Henry, the Kings Second Son, and the Popes Niece Catarina. The Pope, soon after his Return to Rome, fckens and dies, and is succeeded by Cardinal Farnese, who takes the Name o/Paul III. HIS Peace and Confederacy put an End to those long and burdensome Wars, which had continued above Eight Years, with so many mocking Events, and all Italy remained free from the tumultuous Noise and Perils of Arms, except the City of Florence, the War of which had conduced to the Peace of the rest, but the Peace of the rest aggravated its War. For as soon as the Difficulties, which were under Debate, were digested, so as to leave no Room to doubt of bringing the Agreement to Perfection, Casar having removed -A D- removed his Troops from the State of the Venetians, sent Four Thousand German War pro-Foot, ywo Thousand Five Hundred Spagwnst IYitnijnh Foot, Eight Hundred Italians, and FURtntinuaDove Three Hundred Light Horse with Twenty Five Pieces of Artillery, to the War against the Florentines, in which there happened very few Actions, and those hardly worth relating, the Besiegers not having
