

The Life of Samuel Johnson, and the Journal of His Tour to the Hebrides, Vol. 4 of 5 (Classic Reprint)

In 1781, Johnson at last completed his Lives of the Poets, of which he gives this account: Some time in March I finished the Lives of the Poets which I wrote in my usual way, dilatorily and hastily, unwilling to work, and working with vigour and haste, In a memorandum previous to this, he says of them, Written, I hope, in such a manner as may tend to the promotion of piety. -T his is the work, which of all Dr. Johnson swritings will perhaps be read most generally, and with most pleasure. Philology and biography were his favourite pursuits, and those who lived most in intimacy with him, heard him upon all occasions, when there was a proper opportunity, take delight in expatiating upon the various merits of the English Poets :1 T his facility of writing, and this dilatoriness ever to write, Dr. Johnson always retained, from the days he lay a-bed and dictated his first publication to Mr. Hector, to the moment he made me copy out those variations in Pope s Homer which arc printed in the Lives of the Poets. And now, said he, when I had finished it for him, I fear not Mr. Nichols (the printer) a pin. Piozzi. The first livraisoti was published in 1779. This edition of the Poets was in sixty volumes, small octavo. Croker. Prayers and Meditations, p. 174. VOL.
