

Army Special Operations Forces

The world remains a dangerous place, full of authoritarian regimes, terrorist organizations, and criminal interests whose combined influences extend the realm of human suffering. They foster an environment for extremism and the drive to acquire asymmetric capabilities and weapons of mass destruction (WMD). The threats to peace and stability are numerous, complex, oftentimes linked, and sometimes aggravated by natural disaster. The spectrum of likely operations describes a need for ARSOF in joint, combined, and multinational formations for a variety of missions from humanitarian assistance to major theater wars, including conflicts involving the potential use of WMD. ARSOF are responsive and dominant at every point on the spectrum. They provide to the Nation an array of deployable, agile, versatile, lethal, survivable, and sustainable formations, which are affordable and capable of rapidly reversing the conditions of human suffering and decisively resolving conflicts.
